

SOMETHING NEW... Actress Jayne Mansfield demonstrates new multigrade gasoline pump now enabling all Southland motorists to use the most economical fuels that give good performance. The revolutionary pumps dispense seven grades of gasoline at seven prices.

Hancock Stations Inaugurating New 'Econ-O-Blend' Gas Pumps

A revolutionary way to buy gasoline has been initiated on a large scale for motorists in Southern California.

Dispensing seven grades of gasoline at seven prices, Hancock service stations report that for the first time motorists throughout the Southland are offered fuels to fit their individual cars and their pocketbooks. Torrance area Hancock dealers have installed the new pumps, according to Cal Newell, area distributor.

The West's newest gasoline marketing operation utilizes a single "Econ-O-Blend" pump to dispense different fuels by a unique blending at the nozzle.

THE PRINCIPLE of custom blending gasoline is similar to that of regulating hot and cold taps at a sink to get the desired water temperature from a single faucet.

To make it easier for drivers to find ideal fuels for their specific cars, charts posted in Hancock stations list makes, models, and recommended blend numbers. Station attendants have been instructed to "sell down" to customers by suggesting that they keep trying the next lower blend until finding the most economical blend that gives good performance.

THE PUMPS, manufactured by Wayne Pump Co. division of the Symington Wayne Corp., reportedly offer the only new way to buy gasoline here in 25 years. Wide use of the pumps by other companies in the East and Midwest has been highly successful.

Hancock introduced multigrade pumps to the West in August, 1959, at Las Vegas, and initiated their use in California at Placerville in November of last year.

SUBSEQUENTLY, the blender pumps have been installed in Hancock and affiliated Norwalk stations throughout California, with the exception of the San Diego area, where their introduction is scheduled for mid-September.

It has been reported that the new gasoline marketing operation has been well received by the public in the West.

The "pumps with a brain" automatically control the proportion of fuels drawn from the regular-grade tanks and the top-quality premium tanks. The basic fuels are pumped separately through a dual-passage hose to allow mixing only at the nozzle.

By merely changing the dial setting on the side of the pumps, attendants can dispense any one of the seven different fuels. A new setting immediately changes the blend that is dispensed — from the first drop.

Wayne Pump officials report that the "Econ-O-Blend" pumps meet all official legal weights and measures specifications and have been approved by governmental authorities.
